Plan Recommended Bus Service to South Side May Replace Street Cars

Street car service to South Edmonton will be converted to trolley bus operation, a recommendation of the transportation committee of city council is accepted by the parent body.

It is proposed to complete a test line by extending the present trolley bus service over the low level bridge to Whalley and from 104 street from the terminus at 104 street, along White avenue to 108 street, and then north across the high level bridge to Jasper avenue and east to connect with the present trolley line at 102 street.

The city commissioners in a report to the committee point out that ever since the trolley bus line was operated over the high level bridge it has been the intention to complete this test line over the high level bridge.

COST OF CONVERSION
The cost of conversion of the South Side line, including equipment, is estimated at $10,000, with a contingent expenditure of $30,380 on 97 avenue and 100 street, between the parliament building and the low level bridge where a gas bus route will be established to run up town.

The committee recommended also that an order be passed immediately for 12 trolley buses, 16 of which will be used on the proposed south-north line, and the other six on existing city routes. The committee pointed out that the coaches will not be completed until late in 1946, and in their report to the council.

Martell Turns In Card of 71

THORNHILL, Ont. Aug. 4.—(CP)—Byron Hillman of Toledo, O., managed to remain tied for the championship of the Canadian golf championship by shooting a two-over-par 72 that tied him with Ed Purcell of the United States with 212 at the end of the third round today.

THORNHILL, Ont. Aug. 4.—(CP)—Stan Leonard finished with a 73 in the third round of the $10,000 Canadian open here today to lay well up among the leaders with a 217 total for 54 holes. He seemed certain to reverse last year's Canadian professionals with that score at Greyhound of St. John's.

One of the best rounds among the early finishers was the 71 scored by Henry Martell of the United States. That gave him a total of 235 for the 34 holes, and put him in a dead heat with the low Canadian amateur.

See Easement Alberta Feed Grain Problem

Relief for Alberta's feed grain situation was forecast here Saturday by receipt of officials from Dominion government officials that the Canadian Wheat Board and Agriculture Supplies Board are giving close attention to the problem.

H. D. Bruce MacMillan, minister of agriculture, said that the wheat board and agriculture supplies board are giving close attention to the problem.

PLAN FORMULA
Intimation that some formula of Dominion government to relieve the grain situation was being planned was received Friday by O. S. Longman, deputy minister of agriculture.

Mr. Longman's visit was received from J. G. Davidson, feed administrator, who said that it was a result of a request from the Alberta feed situation has been forthcoming.

No indication as to the nature of the plan was received, but there was some indication as to when the information might be forthcoming.

The message apparently was in response to a request from Alberta officials that immediate steps be taken to combat the developing feed shortage. Freezing of feed grain stocks in the province officials was among suggestions made.

City Is Prepared To Assist Housing

Edmonton will participate in any building projects undertaken by the Dominion government, Alberta officials said today. Immediate steps be taken to combat the developing feed shortage. Freezing of feed grain stocks in the province officials was among suggestions made.

Mayor Fry said that he and the city commissioners had been in communication with Dominion authorities and had received assurance that Edmonton would receive substantial assistance under the Dominion Housing Act.

The current plan was to build 200 new units under construction by Bennett and White Construction Co. in the Ritchie district.

Negotiations with the Dominion authorities are proceeding, Mayor Fry said, and it is expected that a definite housing program will be made shortly on the exact number of homes that will be built here by the Dominion government.

Pastor Niemoller Fails
Show Self No. 1 Anti-Nazi

By CHARLES LYNCH
FRANKFURT, Aug. 4.—(Reuters)—Pastor Martin Niemoller, who once was in concentration camps for outspoken protests against the Nazification of the German Evangelical church, apparently has failed to live up to his reputation as Germany's No. 1 anti-Nazi, according to a German newspaper.

However, it is clear that he may still play a vital part in the reformation of Germany.

MacArthur now commands the United States 10th Army on Okinawa, the 6th and 14th Armies in the Philippines, and the 7th and 8th Air Forces which include six Australian divisions and a number of Netherlands troops.

Special Bond Tax Clarified by Isley

OTTAWA, Aug. 4.—(CP)—Finance Minister James G. Gardiner today clarified the special 100 per cent tax on bonds issued by the Dominion government.

When the proposal of refunding the bonds was first discussed with the Dominion government, Mr. Gardiner said, the impression was given that the bonds would be refunded.

Mr. Gardiner said that the bonds would be refunded, but that the refunding would be made during the period when the refunding program was being discussed but could not be definitely known to the original holders of the bonds.

The tax was designed, Mr. Isley said, to assure that the original holders of the bonds and not speculators received the benefits of the refunding program.

Prof. Laski, Power Behind Labor Government, Amazed When Radicalism Makes Headlines

This is one of the series of dispatches on personalities in the new Labor Government of Britain.—EDITOR.

By CHARLES T. HALLINAN
Exclusive to the Edmonton Bulletin
LONDON, Aug. 4.—(BUP)—Prof. Harold J. Laski has not yet been named to any office in the new Labor government of Britain but he is the man whom Conservatives charged in their election campaign would really run the cabinet.

Laski is a 52-year-old economist who this year is serving as the chairman of the British Labor party.

Probably no one was more surprised than Laski to find himself a election issue in the summer of 1929. He was a prominent British newspaper and politician charged he had said that Labor would bring a revolution to Britain he promptly filed libel actions against them under the strict British libel law.

PLAN FOR FRANCO
Laski captured the limelight again after the overwhelming labor party victory by announcing that one of the government's first moves would be to appoint a commission to investigate the Franco regime in Spain. That drew headlines too.

But the pipe-smoking economist never ceases to be amazed when his remarks draw headlines.

His first surprise of that kind came when he was lecturing at Harvard University almost 25 years ago. He expressed his sympathy with the Boston police who were on strike—the same strike that catapulted Calvin Coolidge to national fame.

PUBLIC STORM CENTRE
Overnight Laski found himself a public storm centre so great that he almost abandoned academic life in the United States. He was

Plan Complete Bus Service To South Side

The commissioners state that the conversion cannot be completed until 1947.

SOME APPREHENSION
"It is realized that there will be apprehension on the part of some people as to the safety of running free wheeling vehicles on the upper deck of the high level bridge, and for this reason the city engineer and the street railway department have given long study to the proposed operation," the commissioners reported to the committee.

"It is realized that absolute safety must be the main consideration, and the engineer's department recommends a design under which bus operation can be made even more secure than the street cars, and they have been running over the bridge for well over 30 years without accident."

"The basic design is to run the buses on open mesh steel tread to permit snow clearance, and to have the tread flanked by 18 inch concrete curbs. This will form a kind of trough which a driver could not get out of even if he tried. In addition it is intended to run a substantial fence along the outer edge of the treads. This will provide safety for workmen and others, besides giving an added feeling of security to passengers," the commissioners reported.

WIND CONSIDERED
"The question of wind has been considered," the commissioners reported, "and the bus is found to be safer than the street car because of its lower centre of gravity."

"The only real difficulty the engineers encountered was to devise a track which could be kept clear of snow without the use of salt, which would be objectionable on a steel bridge. The track also has to be definitely anti-skid. The city engineer considered that both these points are adequately taken care of by the use of a patented open mesh steel tread, which is in use in many parts of the United States."

The report continues that "A. W. Haddow, city engineer; Thomas Ferrier, street railway superintendent; and R. J. Gibb, utilities commissioner, visited Seattle last February and satisfied themselves by personal inspection and ample inquiry that the open steel mesh, it is proposed to use on the high level bridge here, adequately fills all requirements."

CONSIDER LOWER DECK
The commissioners report also that the question of running the buses on the lower deck of the high level bridge had been considered, and apart from the fact that the city would have a large investment tied up in the upper deck, the street railway department is certain the operation would not be satisfactory. The narrow turn-outs, low clearance, and slow moving traffic are against the use of the lower deck.

Also considered was the use of the 109 street bridge. This route, while very satisfactory for passengers between the South Side and the city centre, would be an objectionable move for west end passengers, not to mention the traffic from the provincial government offices and points along Jasper avenue west of 103 street, the commissioners submitted.

"We are satisfied that the high level bridge route cannot be abandoned, although the 103 street bridge route may be developed later as an additional artery," the commissioners stated. "The only other alternatives are operations of small gas buses on the lower deck, or the continuance of street car service, both of which have serious drawbacks."

IMPROVED ENTRANCE
The removal of all tracks from 82 avenue to 109 street will give a vastly improved entrance to the city from the south for general traffic, and the present track areas are in a most unsatisfactory condition, and the track itself will require major repairs, unless abandoned in 1947.

Reporting on the proposed conversion A. W. Haddow, city engineer, stated: "The method of converting the upper deck of the high level bridge was given serious consideration as a result of investigation of other points and correspondence with systems having a similar problem."

"It would be necessary to provide a structure which would insure the buses being held in the wheelways, and in addition a substantial fence for the protection of workmen."

SUGGESTS METHOD
"This construction," Mr. Haddow reports, "could be placed on existing concrete ties which have been put in from year to year, and which have considerable life left. It would consist of a strip of 2 1/2 by 3/4 inch steel, on which would be laid an open mesh steel tread, flanked by an 18-inch flared Portland cement concrete curbs. This construction would be applied also on all grades approaching the bridge with the exception of the south east, for which the present pavement would be used."

The estimated cost of the completion of this route, including the high level bridge, $132,000; approaches, $6,000; lifting track and repaving 109 street from 97 avenue to Jasper avenue, $20,600; lifting track and repaving 109 street from Jasper avenue to 88 avenue, $18,200; lifting track and repaving 109 street from 88 avenue to 103 street, $27,760; overhead construction from Jasper avenue and 103 street around the

the shock, however, and in the intervening period has spent almost as much time in the United States as in Britain. He was a friend of President Roosevelt's and was in the United States to observe the start of the New Deal.

His ideas of the labor party's New Deal for Britain pick up at just about the point where the American New Deal left off.

He expressed these thoughts without attracting much attention during the annual conference of the labor party at Blackpool last May. But when he repeated them this week in a trans-Atlantic broadcast he speech caused the quotations on stock of the Bank of England to drop precipitately.

OPPOSED BY UNIONISTS
Laski wrote his first book on political science in 1917. He has been connected with the London School of Economics since 1920 and a professor of political science at London University since 1925.

He has no great popularity with a good many British trades union leaders who regard him as a member of the "intelligentsia" and also as too left-wingish. There is a considerable clash of opinion within the party between its trade union components and the so-called political wing which is not tied to any particular union.

However, he is popular with the party rank and file which, generally, is farther left than the trade union leaders.

SHARP AT REPARTEE
In appearance Laski is thin and bald but he has a great deal of great volume and power and few can match him at sharp and biting repartee.

He has written scores of books and pamphlets and is usually working on two or three at the same time.

Since his views are considerably more radical than those of the labor party which hold the principal offices in government, it was expected that Laski's role might be that of a gadfly to spur them to more rapid and more sweeping action in carrying out the labor party pledges of socializing large arguments of British industry and finance.

Plan Construction Pulp, Paper Mills
PORT ARTHUR, Ont. Aug. 4.—(CP)—One of the greatest concentrations of pulp and paper mills in the world is destined for the north shore of Lake Superior, and already agreements calling for the expenditure of at least $50,000,000 have been signed between Canadian and United States companies and the Ontario government, it was learned yesterday. Three mills now are under construction, with production scheduled for one of them before the end of 1935. Another is to be in operation next year, a third will start shipping in 1937.

Monday's Conference

On Monday the long-awaited conference between federal and provincial authorities will open with the premiers in attendance. It will be a momentous meeting because it will attempt to lay the groundwork for a readjustment of interprovincial and provincial relations, in short, to lay the foundation for the modernization of the Canadian constitution.

The Canadian constitution was drawn up in 1867 and was based on the circumstances and needs of 1867. Only four of the nine provinces were in the Confederation when the constitution was signed, Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. The other four, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, were not added until 1905.

It is obvious, then, that the constitution is outdated. The present conference is to decide what to do about it. There have been two main attempts to adjust our constitution in the past 12 years. Prime Minister Bennett had parliament pass eight bills dealing with constitutional matters. Five of these were thrown out by the privy council.

The second effort was made by Prime Minister King in 1927 when he appointed a royal commission, headed first by the Hon. N. W. Rowell and later by Joseph Royle, to investigate federal-provincial relations. This commission spent two years on the job and travelled from coast to coast taking evidence at every important point.

In 1941, a federal-provincial conference met to discuss the Siriois report but dissolved in disagreement almost before it got started.

It is interesting and perhaps useful, however, to recall some of the recommendations of that report as providing an outline of Canada's constitutional deficiencies. In addition to the main provisions of the Siriois plan, the report recommended some simpler means of amending the British North America Act, and the provinces and federal government to delegate their powers to each other, a more logical division of authority between the provinces and the federal government concerning agriculture, labor, transportation, marketing and fisheries and regular federal-provincial conferences.

Chief features of the plan were these:

1. That the federal government should assume all provincial debts.
2. That the federal government should take over full responsibility for unemployment relief and administer unemployment insurance.
3. That the provinces should relinquish their rights to federal subsidies and their rights to levy income, personal and corporate and succession duties.
4. That beyond the foregoing every province should carry on its normal functions of government. If a province were unable to provide educational and social services equal to the average Canadian standard within five years, the federal assistance should be granted by the Dominion.
5. Provinces and municipalities should continue to borrow.
6. A percentage of taxes taken from companies producing oil or minerals should be paid to the province containing those natural resources.

7. No federal control of provincial expenditures should be maintained. These were the chief points of the Siriois report in its broader aspects. It will furnish an agenda if not a guide for Monday's conference.

They Can't Win

More than one Edmonton war veteran, so many confess privately, have fallen into the hands of professional gamblers and been fleeced of their savings. One of these is the case of a Mr. J. J. McQuinn, of the Edmonton. He is said to have been "taken" for as much as $3,000. He had built up a nest egg over five years of war service and now finds himself without a cent and with a dependent wife.

Everyone will sympathize with this young man who has been fleeced of his money. But neither sympathy nor reproach will restore his money nor prevent other gamblers from getting into gambling games in which they have no solitary chance to win.

The mere fact that gambling is illegal does not begin to cope with the problem. Police authorities can exercise the strictest vigilance without preventing all the bad game rooms. So long as there is big profit for the professional sharpers they will find a way to evade the law and draw in the unwary service men.

There is one remedy, however, which is said to have been employed with good results among British United States forces. That is education.

The Canadian Army and the National War Services Department have established educational branches. In their mathematics courses, servicemen could be shown just what they are up against in cards, dice, roulette and other game devices. If the boys were made to realize the percentage against them, it would be a strong deterrent against the fictitious lure of quick and easy gains.

It is a proceeding, at any rate, that the agencies would be well advised to consider.

Britain in the Pacific

Official American spokesmen have already offered full replies to those ill-informed persons who have been circulating the allegation throughout the United States that Britain is not having a full share of the war in the Pacific.

Hard facts indicate how completely those rumors are unfounded.

The British Pacific fleet, for instance, has been in the Pacific for months, operating against the Japanese at Sakashima, Truk and Formosa. Now it has joined with Admiral Halsey's third fleet in the Pacific against the Japanese mainland. It includes three 35,000-ton battleships, the King George V, the Queen Elizabeth and the York. This only leaves one battleship of this most modern class, the Anson, not yet mentioned in the Pacific theatre.

Of the six large fast new aircraft carriers (excluding light fleet carriers and "baby flat tops") in the Royal Navy, five are in the Pacific. In addition, there is a formidable force of cruisers and destroyers.

So far as the Army is concerned, the war in the Pacific is being fought in operations on the continent of Asia as well as in Burma. The Allied combat forces engaged in this campaign were 85 percent British, 15 percent Chinese and 10 percent Australian.

In Melanesia and Borneo, six Australian divisions are participating in operations on the arc of 3,000 miles from Bougainville in the east to Borneo in the west. This represents the peak of Australian land operations since the outbreak of the war.

Of the considerable air forces in the China-Burma-India theatre, 40 percent are American, 30 percent are British and British Commonwealth forces in Burma are 100 percent R.A.F. and 10 percent American.

Surely there is nothing here to indicate a feeble or tardy or reluctant effort on the part of the Empire against Japan.

The Reaction Here

By DOROTHY THOMPSON
The first reaction to the British elections was that it was a fundamental difference between the two parties. The Labour government was already over. Gradually the country is awakening to the fact that if the Labour government succeeds in the United States is going to stand in the way of the great power capitalist country.

The reactions to the Labour government are not all of the same kind. Some are of the kind that the Labour government is a disaster. Some are of the kind that the Labour government is a disaster. Some are of the kind that the Labour government is a disaster.

Others see that the world trend is more likely to aid the Democrats than the Republicans and, after all, Mr. Truman is a Democrat. The left wing in the Democratic party, which for 12 years has been the more dynamic and progressive, is now in a position to take the lead in the United States.

But I would like to explore in this column the dilemma of the Conservative and Labour parties in the present, in its place, at a meeting, let us say, of the board of directors of an American company. At that meeting there will be a discussion of the future of the world, and the time has come to fight. America, he will argue, has become the production and financial centre of the world and cannot afford to be out of the world.

Major and Minor Notes

By John Oliver

LAST year, it will be remembered, the Women's Musical Club elected to depart from established custom and strike out on a new, untried trail for its annual meeting of the regular season at the Masonic Temple. That meeting was held in the evening during the week instead of Saturday afternoon, which is the usual time. The experiment met with success. There was a large audience on hand and approval was given to the idea. Nothing succeeds like success, and this year a similar plan will be followed. The initial concert will take place on Friday night, Oct. 5, and this year a similar plan will be followed. The initial concert will take place on Friday night, Oct. 5, and this year a similar plan will be followed.

JOHN OLIVER, the guest artist will be Frederick K. Oliver, a Canadian pianist who will make his first appearance here. It will be noted that again the early start is being made in the hope of terminating activities before August sun warms the soil and backs on to the out-of-doors.

Last year the early start was made, but there were subsequent delay and postponement. In the net result, spread the season out a little longer than last year instead of ending during March. However, without impediment and given amply sailing, there should be no such retardation this time.

Mr. Newman, apparently, has specialized in oratorio work, as records reveal that many of his appearances have been in this field. There have been many concerts, including his New York debut at Town Hall where the New York Times remarked that "he was cordially received throughout." Among his oratorio assignments have been "The Messiah" at Am Anso and Basil Kere, Mich. "Belshazzar's Feast" at the University of Toronto. Mendelssohn Choir: "The Elijah" with the Acadia Choir Society, Acadia University, Wolfville, N.S. "Judas Macabeus" with the Toronto N.S. Philharmonic Choral Society. "Saul" with the Philharmonic Choral Society of Halifax. "The Creation" with the Windsor, N.S. Choral Society. Faure's "Requiem" with the St. Michael's Choir, London, Choral Society and the Brahms "Requiem" in England.

In addition, he has appeared as soloist with many orchestras and other groups, including the NBC Symphony and concerts at Wigmore Hall, London. Officials of the Women's Musical Club have stated they are confident he will maintain the standard of previous evening recitals.

In the recent Toronto Conservatory of Music piano examinations here, Wintour Robertson, 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James Robertson, 1111 95 street, was one of the best. He was awarded first class honors in Grade 2, with John Reymes-King awarding 85 marks. John Robertson, 14 years old, with three years old lessons to his credit passed his Grade 3 piano with honors and won commendation from Mr. Reymes-King. Both boys are pupils of Kathleen Gould.

On Thursday, one of the most colorful, famous and accomplished composers of contemporary times—Pietro Mascagni—died in Rome. He was 82 years old. His fame rests on his opera "Cavalleria Rusticana" as securely as Bartol's rests on "Carmen," yet both composers of contemporary times. And of all the scores of "Cavalleria Rusticana" the best-known piece is the "Cavatina" which has been played countless times and which is one of the stories of love, passion and tragedy that has been continuing its way, unimpaired and unaffected by the torrid story on the stage.

His other operas include "L'Amico Fritz," "Ritorno," "Ritorno," "Iris," "Silvano," and "Narciso." There are hardly known outside Italy, although "Iris" found a Japanese subject, contained a wealth of beautiful music. Mascagni, like his countryman, Leoncavallo, was dwarfed by the genius of Giacomo Puccini, but he was the successor to Verdi as Italy's chief composer.

Mascagni was born at Livorno Dec. 7, 1863. His father was a doctor, but his mother was a singer. He was sent to his musical instructor, where he studied hard for three years, 1881-1884. Besides his academic work in theory and composition, he gained a practical knowledge of all the orchestral instruments. When he left the Conservatory, Mascagni found a field of opportunity in the direction of an opera company. At Parma he was conducted in public for the first time, where he was being Leoncavallo's "Heart and Hand." The company visited many of the large and small towns of Italy and finally, after many vicissitudes, collapsed and Mascagni was left stranded.

The history of "Cavalleria" and its success at one time was well publicized; how it was sent by the composer to a friend, who pronounced it "rubbish" and how Mascagni despondently entered it in the competition for the prize of 2,000 francs offered by Sonzogno, Milan music publisher for the best one-act opera, how the composer accepted the prize as a windfall, he sent the wildest hopes of a man.

FOR POLANO—More than a century ago, Frederic Chopin, Polish poet, musician and composer, angered by the domination of Poland by Russia, wrote the "Polonaise." It became Poland's fighting song, a cry for independence. Recently Sgt. Eugene List, above noted, American pianist now in the army, played at Potsdam for the Big Three party. Russia's Stalin was the young pianist audaciously played the "Polonaise." Stalin listened, beamed, teased the young artist's presentation of Chopin's patriotic cry for Poland. Sgt. List is married to Carroll Glenn, violinist who appeared here two years ago in the Women's Musical Club Celebrity Series.

who with wife and two children was existing on 50 cents a day.

In temperament, disposition and character, Mascagni was earnest, active, benevolent, sincere and reliable, although he suffered much as a result of the war, and saw his fortune vanish. Pronounced success in life did not appear to have changed his nature materially, for throughout most of his career he exhibited the same frank, ingenuous traits of character as he did in his boyhood. He compared with a remarkable figure, and the spontaneity of his inspiration was what he was rarely at a loss for appropriate music.

When he received a new libretto, he was content to read it daily, studying the details of the living scenes and action. He did not necessarily begin at the beginning, but chose a scene anywhere that attracted him and read it until the words turned into music. Then he sat down to the piano and the notes came rapidly. "Cavalleria" was played here by the San Carlo Opera Company, and was produced also by the Women's Musical Club at the Empire Theatre. Mascagni will be remembered for many years for his richly-colored and dramatically effective.

Mag.-Gen. Odium Reviews Outlook

Canada's Share in Defeating Japan Depends on Getting Men, Arms to Front

By ROBERT YACKERMAN CHUNGKING

(AP)—"Canada's share in defeating Japan depends on finding ways to get her men, supplies and arms to the fighting zone and U.S.-Canadian co-operation to this end is based on how much the United States is willing to do for the best advantage," says Maj.-Gen. Victor Odium, Canadian ambassador to China.

At present the problem is to find where to put Canadian men and fighting tools, the ambassador said in an exclusive interview with the Associated Press. "Even the United States, which has control of Allied operations in conjunction with the Chinese forces, can't bring into China all it wants nor house all it can bring it," he explained.

"The only solution now in sight is to use Canadian troops, on a comparatively small scale so that a separate command will not be necessary, as a unit in an American force."

MANY TROOPS READY

"Victory in Europe has released many thousands of troops from Canadian troops, trucks, heavy vehicles and prime movers. A good part of it is now at the disposal of the Americans in the war to beat the Japanese."

The major problem is to "make Canadian army, fighting technique and all variations are due to the American system of warfare because most of the war effort is waged from now on in the Pacific."

MAJ.-GEN. VICTOR ODIUM

China-Japan theatre will be an American and Chinese show," he said.

"Of course if Russia were to make air bases available to the Allies it would help the Canadian air force."

"Take a look at China," he said. "America has to get a heavy price to gain that base. If Canada were to try the same thing, the price would be a disproportionate one."

part of her total expenditures forces had to get a place for future operations.

"Canada can best contribute to the Far Eastern war in bringing into operation some of her Royal Canadian Air Force and her naval units."

"At one time we estimated that our technicians could outfit 50 air squadrons to be used against Japan. But the probability of success, of bases of defence. There are no bases in China, but no available fuel. And the routes into China are already overstrained."

HAS OWN EQUIPMENT

The RCAF has its own equipment, planes, machines, and techniques which worked effectively in the Far East. "This equipment is more like that of the British RAF than that of the U.S. Air Force. Our men are trained with this equipment and it would be almost impossible to change it."

"In Europe numbers were on possible to make a switch over.

"Allied military leaders, including Canadian, agree that the best to allow American planes and the military leaders to use the Chinese inside China. In any event they have more planes available than they have lost to service them."

"The Canadian naval contribution will operate under the British Pacific fleet which, in turn, is under the American command."

TRAIN IN STATES

"Canadian ground forces are being trained in the United States with American equipment, arms and techniques so that they may fight as much like an American unit as possible."

"The simple fact is that the Pacific is a recognized American theatre of war. American leaders rightly want simplicity and unity of command and this cannot be secured by receiving formations from other countries large enough to require their own command and supply systems. Canada is a junior partner in the Pacific, as she was in Europe."

"In Europe numbers were on squid, and there was room to gain and to supply them. In the Western Pacific, there are more troops available than there is room for them—that is, in areas where the supply lines stretch. The major task is to increase efficiency, not numbers."

GAUCHES DISAPPOINTED

"Canadians in the Pacific are disappointed that their role is not greater one, but they are glad to have an opportunity to support the war with the Americans even if it is only in a comparatively small way. In Europe the leadership, as far as Canada was concerned, was British. In the Pacific it will be American."

After Shortages Survey Shows Food Supply In Dominion Near Normal

By The Canadian Press
Canada's midsummer food supply is near normal, an informal survey by The Canadian Press showed today. The potato shortage—early summer bugaboo for housewives in the Dominion—nearly complete relief with harvest of local crops in most provinces.

Despite potato shortages due to the late season and later shortages of supplies of meat, vegetables and other food stuffs generally were ample.

Early in July an acute shortage of potatoes was felt throughout the Dominion, but the situation showed improvement in the month with harvesting of home-grown crops.

MORE PLENTIFUL
Potatoes became more plentiful in Quebec following the early summer harvest. Toronto dealers in short supply in the Montreal area in the late spring and long rainy period.

In Ontario the potato supply reached near normal after weeks of shortage. Most dealers had a reserve supply on hand as local crops were harvested. Dealers described the overall meat situation as normal during July.

Supplies of home-grown vegetables reached the Manitoba market, and potatoes were in short supply in the west. Pork products dropped during July as lamb was light, heavily dependent for beef was still met adequately in most areas. Potatoes continued scarce.

SHORTAGE EASED
Potato shipments from British Columbia eased the shortage in Saskatchewan where local harvests were scheduled to start in two weeks. Canned tomatoes were at a premium in the Regina area.

With the exception of a few seasonal shortages, the Alberta food picture was normal. Grass-fed beef appeared on the market, and retailers received sufficient poultry stocks to meet the demand. Normal supplies of meat fruits were reported.

Some disappearance from butchers' counters late in July as British Columbia meat supply decreased. Although the trend was upward, continued, stocks of smoked meats were plentiful. Onions and carrots were scarce but the potato shortage eased with local harvests.

Limited quantities of canned fruit and apples were reported on the Vancouver market. Maple syrup, peanut butter, cheese crackers, honey and sweetened pudding powder appeared in good supply. A few bananas arrived although fruit dealers described the quantity received as "a drop in the bucket" for the disappointed customers to one pound each.

Rommel Suicides: Avoids Execution

BAD TOLZ, Germany, Aug. 4.—(AP)—A son of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel declared in a sworn statement that his father committed suicide as an alternative to a death sentence passed by a people's court "because he was suspected of complicity in the July 20 plot, both as a conspirator and as a participant in the plot on Hitler's life."

The statement, released by U. S. 3rd Army headquarters, was made by Manfred Rommel, 17-year-old son of the German "Desert Fox" Erwin Rommel.

(Allied officers at the military court on June 25 that they had been told by a German officer that Rommel had committed suicide in order to avoid the death penalty for allegedly participating in the plot on Hitler's life.)

Weather Hopes For a Friday May Be Dashed

"Cloudy and cool" weather is the best forecast Edmonton's weathermen had for the long week-end occasion by the civic holiday Monday. The 25th-met of Saturday now promised a damp, pleasant day with a light rain.

The wet weather resulted in post-ponement of the race both at the racetrack and the fair. The 25th-met of Saturday now promised a damp, pleasant day with a light rain.

Regardless of poor weather prospects, thousands of Edmonton residents made plans for a holiday trip over Sunday and Monday. "Crossed fingers" of the younger generation indicated high hopes that after all, the weatherman could be wrong just this once.

WEIGHTY RAINFALL
The week-end rainstorm centered over Edmonton Friday when a wet fall drenched all parts of the city.

Heavy lightning accompanied the rain, and the rainstorm was the CICA transmitter at Bell. The 25th-met of Saturday now promised a damp, pleasant day with a light rain.

According to radio engineers, intense heat of the "juice" melted the equipment, but they were re-wired by molten metal after the flash passed by.

The ROAD AHEAD

By Capt. HARPER PROWSE, M.L.A.

EVER since it became certain that the United Nations would defeat the German war machine there has been a rush to give and claim credit for the victory. The heroic achievements of the gallant Russians have been extolled and the tremendous production and spectacular triumphs of the Americans have been shouted from the house-tops. But the only time one hears anything about the little people of England and the Empire, who stood alone for one whole black, bleak year, is when some old prophet raises his voice in criticism.

And yet it was the most courageous, the determined faith, and the unflinching effort at the little people of England, Australia and Wales, that saved the world from Nazi tyranny. It was British pilots in British planes during the dark days of 1940 and 1941 who turned back the German Luftwaffe and caused Hitler to look to the east instead of to the west.

It was this gallant little people who spent their nights in air-raid shelters and their days in war factories who kept alive the lamp of hope—and gave the stronger nations time to prepare and set them an example in self-sacrifice that has never been equalled.

Canada's war effort has been great, but our sacrifices have been few compared with the "Mother Country." Tax collections in Canada for 1941 totalled more than two billion dollars, or $100 for every

To Investigate Derrick Crash Oil Well Site

Hint that some action may be taken against the oil company engaged in drilling operations in Alberta was given here Friday by Hon. W. F. Patterson, minister of public works, shortly before he left for Ottawa to attend the Dominion provincial conference which opens in the capital city Monday.

In a terse statement issued concerning collapse of a derrick in which two men were killed in central Alberta last week, the minister said:

A full report has been received concerning the fatal accident at the House Creek No. 11, on July 26.

SERIOUS MATTER

"The circumstances surrounding these accidents are so serious that it has been decided to refer the matter to the attorney-general, department for further handling."

The minister said as soon as the attorney-general has completed an investigation of the matter, a further statement will be made as to the course of action that will be taken.

Mechanical branch of the public works department has jurisdiction over all mechanical erections and operations in the province. Investigation of the fatal derrick collapse has been completed by the mechanical branch, which submitted its report to Mr. Miller.

YOUNG AIR FORCE VETERANS NOW GROCERS—Groceries are always in necessary to people so the grocery business ought to have a good future, was the way John Lee and Jerry McHale, two 21-year-old former Edmonton airmen reasoned. So they borrowed money and bought a grocery store known as "Norwood Meat and Grocery" at 9432 111 avenue. They are shown above busy arranging stock on the shelves of their shop. At the left is Lee, while McHale is at the right. Both boys made the life an arduous task but are highly pleased with their first month as grocers.

Air Force Veterans Claim Battle of Readjustment is Easily Won By Starting In Business on Discharge

Business of his own is the dream of many a young air veteran. To quite a few that dream is coming true. Today's story in The Edmonton Bulletin's "Business Sense" section of air veterans deals with two young former airmen who are now running their own "shop" in a business sense—EDITOR.

By JACK DELONG
The battle of readjustment is easily won by any veteran who starts up in business on discharge.

This was the opinion expressed by each of two young grocers, John Lee, 12320 Spring Plain Road, and Jerry McHale, 1117 7th street, who currently operate the "Norwood Meat and Grocery," 9432 111 avenue.

Former members of the RCAF, both grocers-veterans are only 21 years of age.

Lee, who was born in Ontario, southern Alberta, was a pilot officer and qualified bomb aimer on discharge some months ago.

BORN IN EDMONTON
McHale, training for aircraft on discharge, was born in Edmonton. Both boys lived in Edmonton most of their lives and were attending St. Joseph's high school when they enlisted together in July of 1942.

Both are disappointed that the big show in Europe got over before they had a chance to do their stuff overseas, and young Lee is making strenuous efforts to get on with the RCAF force that will operate in the Pacific.

The grocers' interest in July of 1942.
For some months after their honorable discharge they couldn't settle down to what to do.

PURCHASE BUSINESS
Then after each securing a loan from "Dad" they purchased the "Norwood Meat and Grocery" on 111 avenue.

"It's really great being in business and being able to do what we want for harder than we did in the air force," Lee said recently.

"If a serviceman wants to get down to business, he should start with a small business."

Your Baby And Mine

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDERED

Because it is hard to convince mothers that to give attention to a small, crying baby will not develop a spoiled child, I am printing part of a letter that shows how this works.

Mrs. N. D. H. writes: "I want to thank you from the bottom of my heart for your excellent advice about how to solve my baby's crying. He was four months old at the time I sought your help, and now he is eight months old and I couldn't ask for a baby with a few more sleepless nights."

"Let me say, though, that I followed your suggestions to end his crying, with the greatest misgiving. It did take me about a month of almost constant entertaining to get results. But, suddenly one day I found the crying had ended and he was happy to amuse himself."

"My friends said I would have to live with him the rest of his life, one I started it. But now my son is happier and plays better alone than do their children that were forced to play alone. This does mean that I never play with him now for I spend about ten minutes of every hour showing him attention."

Parents have been so well served by the idea that if a crying child is shown attention it will develop a desire for more and more of it and "crying it out" is the right policy. It is hard to change this practice.

Crying always has some cause. It is within the cause being sought, that one should not allow the baby to exhaust himself and develop a crying habit. One should make him comfortable. One should change his position frequently. One should pat him and coo to him and if necessary, rock him until he is quiet.

Then one should be on the alert to try to determine why he has to cry. He has to cry for attention, he is hungry, he is cold, he is hot, he is uncomfortable, he is tired, he is hungry. Don't let anyone tell you he is not.

When mothers tell me how their babies cry all the time, one can see the need for drastic change. It is the way the baby is being fed. The well-fed baby seldom cries and if he does it is a cry of absolute discomfort.

If he cries and cries after a particularly meal or throughout the day, don't call him a cry-baby and spoil and deny him attention. Give him attention and make up your mind something important in his care or feeding program needs change.

Our leaflet, "The First Six Weeks," will give a mother to give the baby a good start in life. It will be sent by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope with this paper to Myrtle Meyer Eldered in care of this newspaper.

THE LINES IN ONE'S HAND INDICATE NOTHING

The lines and creases in one's hand are the result of the bending and folding of the fingers and hand in the act of grasping and indicate nothing more than the wrinkles in a folded paper. Dr. F. W. Westaway, in his "Observations and Conclusions of the Human Palm-prints," declares: "There is no reason why the three main lines of the palm of the hand should be called the life, heart and brain lines than the lines, liver and appendix lines. The whole idea of reading fortune in the palm is a rational and contrary view to common sense."

There is no slightest scientific proof that palmistry is anything but an old superstition carried down to our day.

Jesuit priests at Lima, Peru, are credited with the discovery of the antismarial value of cinchona bark about 1630.

Edmonton Airman Shot Down Nazis

WITH CANADIANS IN THE RAF—A German fighter aircraft shot down a British bomber in the operation against Nuremberg, the largest night raid in the history of Bomber Command. Flight Lieutenant S. Skinner, Lancaster pilot, Westminister, 14 years and 100 average, Edmonton, was among those who escaped after fighting off three night fighters.

They were quipped up waiting for us when we got to Stuttgart," said Skinner, veteran of more than 20 bombing flights when the European war was ended. The sky was filled with FW-190s, and we got our share."

He fired the first attack but his wireless operator, standing in the astro dome on board, had his skull creased by machine gun fire when the next Nazi fighter came in. Bullets cut through his helmet and broke the skin, but the WOP suffered no serious injury. A cannon shell ploughed through the starboard outer petrol tank but, fortunately, it was dry. Taking evasive action, Skinner side-stepped the third fighter.

In a daylight fight against Bremen, flight leader Sir Skinner lost 3,000 feet before getting away from the blinding beams.

Teen-Aged Scientist Amazes the Experts

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 4.—(AP)—Several scientists are watching with interest the scientific progress of a 17-year-old girl, Alice Dale of Columbia, Tenn., who is enrolled in Vanderbilt University here.

After a 16-week aviation last year by building a mechanical motor, a tin can plane, parts of a radio, and a mechanical clock, she is now working on a mechanical clock.

After the guinea pig operation, her school science teacher, Joseph Shapton, suggested that Alice and her experiments with living organisms might be noteworthy enough to win a prize in the annual science search conducted by the Westinghouse Company among high school students.

So Alice worked on, putting in her time in the laboratory.

The long-suffering gardener can look forward to relief from the backbreaking chore of digging weeds from his lawn, at long last. A revolutionary selective chemical killer of the toughest weeds with which he has had to contend is about to make its appearance on the Canadian scene, according to an announcement from the Naugatuck Chemical Division of Dominion Rubber Company Limited.

The new weed killer will be known as "2-4-D," a contraction of its proper name of 2,4-dichlorophenoxyacetic acid, and is an anion product, DDT, manufactured by the same company, promises to arouse considerable interest in the general public. 2-4-D is manufactured by Dominion Rubber will spray slightly from the product bottles used for this purpose. Sprayed on affected areas, it is absorbed through the leaves of the weeds and is carried through the branches into the farthest root tip.

Ordinary concentrations do not affect most grasses. Just what happens inside the stem is not known, but apparently it either breaks down the cell walls or paralyzes them so that they are incapable of weeds within a day, and in the course of time wither and die.

PROVEN KILLER

Up to the present it is known that 2-4-D definitely kills more than 30 varieties of weeds including bindweed, burdock, dandelion, and perennial grass. It is a white powder in form, it can be dissolved in water, with the aid of a small amount of another chemical. It will be supplied to the general public in liquid form, requiring addition of water only.

It is effective when used in such solutions at the rate of one to one-and-a-half parts per thousand. Ten gallons of the solution will treat a thorough job on 2,000 square feet of lawn. It will not control spraying equipment. It is selective in action, controlling the broad-leaved types of vegetation and not disturbing the grasses. It is non-poisonous to human beings and to animals when used as directed.

Kitchen and Bathroom Gauge Value of House

A kitchen that is a modern, cheerful, efficient working hall, and a bathroom that embodies convenience, comfort and economy, are the two most important factors in determining the value of a house. In planning the bathroom, remember that your choice of equipment and accessories is a permanent one, and keep in mind that what you spend, somewhere else, you can most important factors in determining the value of a house.

In the kitchen its convenience as well as modernity that counts. Arrange your kitchen so that there is a natural flow pattern from food coming in, food being washed, food being stored, food being cooked and food being served. And see that the working levels, particularly in the case of the sink and table, are the right height for the person who will use them most.

Remember that it is to be kept in mind so don't skimp on equipment. You may never want to sell your house, but then again circumstances of one sort or another may make it necessary. It is wise to consider this when planning and to remember that the bathroom and kitchen often determine the price you can get for the house.

Consult a local plumber when planning. A plumber, always in close touch with developments in his field, can give you valuable advice and guidance in your choice of bathroom and kitchen equipment and accessories.

Tomatoes Need Application Of Nitrogen After Wet Period

Well-staked and cared-for tomatoes will bring a smile on your face as bright as this girl gardener's when contemplating a racy-chopped product.

Tomato plants in the Victory Garden have taken a awful beating, judging by reports coming in that they contain 1 per cent. insoluble copper. Wet and cold weather, general throughout the country, following a rather early and warm spring, caused a leaching away of much of the available nitrogen from the area about the plant roots. The yellowing of the lower leaves on many tomato plants.

First aid should be given your plants by applying a small handful of Victory Garden 4-1-4 fertilizer about each plant, says H. D. Brown, Department of Horticulture, Ohio State University. Care should be taken not to get the fertilizer in direct contact with the plant or the roots, which due to the wet season, have formed very near the surface. Application should be light and water should be applied if rain does not follow spreading of the fertilizer. Straw mulches are advised in conserving moisture and to eliminate the root injury which is frequently the cause of leaf curl. Top pruning also causes the lower leaves to curl.

Due to the wet season, tomato plants are bound to be infected with the two foliage diseases, Alternaria and Septoria leaf blight, which are already causing a great deal of damage. This disease can be partially controlled by use of a copper drench or spray. Drench which contain 1 per cent. insoluble copper are most generally used. The drench should be applied in the morning while the dew is on and, if the wet weather persists, it will be necessary to make five or six applications to get reasonable control of the foliage diseases. The application should be made live to 10 days apart.

from leaf and chattering notes give you some idea of the early stages of aphids. At the present time the aphid population has been almost entirely exterminated on favorable temperatures and by the status of many of the parasites which kill aphids.

Victory gardeners who use the plan a great deal of tomatoes need not worry. Blasted and wilted plants can be replaced by a vigorous replacement of new ones from the top of the tomato plant. Some gardeners who have been told to remove the top of the tomato plant must carefully check the soil for signs of moisture, which is the cause of the problem. With the usual care of the tomato plant, it is better likely that the problem will be solved. The drench should be applied in the morning while the dew is on and, if the wet weather persists, it will be necessary to make five or six applications to get reasonable control of the foliage diseases. The application should be made live to 10 days apart.

SASKATCHEWAN LEADS CANADA IN RECREATIONAL PROGRAM TO IMPROVE MENTAL. Metal handicraft is new to rural children in Saskatchewan. They are learning to make things as drinking cups and tin pens out of old cans, such as the one Truman Norcross is making here. Saskatchewan's recreational program, the most highly organized of any province in Canada, aims at providing activity for every person in the province. Basketball, shown here, is one of sports included in program.

MORAL, SPIRITUAL AND PHYSICAL FITNESS. Drama groups, sponsored by the Saskatchewan Recreational Movement, may soon lead to revival of the Chataqua days. It is planned to organize traveling music and drama teams and send them on a tour of the province. Margaret Bort and Myrtle Lipsett are in a play.

NO PLACE TO BE FOOTLOOSE.—Lawrence Lawson, 44, veteran Washington, D.C. sleepjacker, dangles by one safety strap midway up a 50-foot flagpole at the top of the 24-storey Central National Bank Building in Richmond, Va. The near-tragedy occurred when he kicked off one strap while climbing pole to untangle flag rope fouled during recent storm. Two fellow pole-climbers rescued him, apparently none the worse for his experience, after he had dangled an hour. Arrow points to Lawson in the picture at left. A closeup is shown at right.

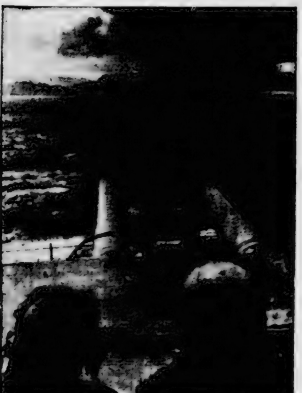

STARDUST.—Meet "Miss Stardust of 1945." She's Eleanor Cahill, above, of Colorado, Calif., who won the title from over 8,000 rivals in a national contest. Along with the honor went a $500 war bond and a modeling contract.

MYSTERY STORY.—Ages-old symbols of mystery met when the comely member of the British Army's Auxiliary Territorial Service, pictured above, went sun-bathing in the desert with the Sphinx as a backdrop. She was on leave from her post in Cairo.

ARCHERY IS SERIOUS BUSINESS IN NORTH BAY, ONT.—No William Tell stuff is tolerated in the North Bay Archery club where safety is a byword, but the upper picture of a hat being pierced by an arrow is to show the members are no slouches and can pin a hat as easily as a sheet shooter hits a clay pigeon. The sport has become very popular with the 35 members of the club averaging at least an hour a day on the archery range. Don't pull too hard, cautions Ted Forsyth in the lower picture, captain of the club and chief of police in North Bay, Ont., as he gives Gwen Edwards a few pointers. Many of the beginners try too hard, he says. The idea is to work up to a strong bow as skill develops.

U.S. SHIPS SHELL KAMAISHI.—Sixteen-inch guns of the mighty USS Massachusetts point toward burning Kamaishi after the first shelling of Japan's homeland by the rampaging United States fleet. The important port and factory town is on the shores of Honshu, north of Tokyo.

18 ON THE 15TH FOR JOAN.—Actress Joan Leslie poses with 15 kittens born to her black cat, "Lucky," on Friday the 13th. That, at least, is the way the screen star's press agent tells it.

MICRO-RADIO.—Lois Dean, above, displays a new short-pocket size radio, little larger than a cigarette case, scheduled for early production by Excelsior, Ill. firm. It weighs 15 ounces, includes batteries and four tubes. Speaker is an ear-piece of hearingaid type, with aerial attached.

WITHOUT BROW.—With her brow broken off in a furious Pittsburg symphony, the center Pittsburg is shown pushing her way through rough waters on the way to drydock.

BIG GAME

NOW that the frogs were fat, the Teenie Weenie men were busy getting in their supply of meat for the winter. It takes a great many frog hams to last the Teenie Weenies through the winter, for it is the only meat the little people eat. They usually pickle a few minnows and preserve some crawfish meat, but smoked frog ham is the regular Teenie Weenie meat dish.

The hams are salted and then smoked in the Teenie Weenie smokehouse which the little folks made out of an old tomato can. Some shoulder hams are smoked and some of them are made into frog sausage. It takes about 40 hams to supply the Teenie Weenies with meat and that means the little men must capture 10 frogs. Hunting frogs is most exciting and the Teenie Weenie men always look forward to the hunting season.

The best frogs are found in a little pond beside the creek that flows near the Teenie Weenie village. The men slip quietly up on the frogs when they are sitting on the bank of the pond. Frogs are not afraid of the Teenie Weenies and they seldom jump into the water when the little men approach. Teenie Weenies are so small the frogs never expect harm to come from such tiny people, and so they sit quietly until the little men get very near them. But the minute the Cowboy's lasso falls over their heads, the frogs leap into the water.

The Teenie Weenie Indian had discovered a huge frog, so a number of the little men made up their minds to capture it.

THE TEENIE WEEENIES

BY WM. DONAHEY

In spite of the animal's size, several of the men decided to try and catch it. One morning they found it sitting on the bank of the pond and, slipping quietly up behind the big fellow, they waited for the Cowboy to lasso it.

"Now just the moment I drop the noose over its head, you fellows jump in and grab it," the Cowboy whispered. "You'll have to hold on tight if we get him, for he is a mighty big frog."

The Cowboy swung his lasso and dropped it neatly over the head of the frog and at the same instant several of the Teenie Weenies grabbed the beast's legs. The minute the rope and the Teenie Weenies touched the frog, it leaped into the air, carrying with it the several little men who had held onto him. The frog dived into the pond and the Teenie Weenies dived with him but they quickly came to the surface of the water and swam to the shore.

"Shucks!" growled the Dunce as he stood dripping. "We sure lost a lot of ham sandwiches that time!"
